When a adage has two objects (a direct object and an indirect object), the object adage is indirectly used instead of a nod to show who or runs the action for the purpose of benefiting or harming, for example, I in Him gave me a book; Can you get me a towel? It is important to understand the difference between direct and indirect subject replies, since they have different forms in German: an object that indirectly answers the question who? or who gives? and for what? or for what? He gave me a book. → you give the book to? → (= indirect subjectom word) Can you get me a towel? → can you get a towel for? → (= indirect object replies) if something answers the question what? or who?, then it was the direct object and not the indirect object He gave me a book → What did he give me? → the book (= direct object) Can you get me a scarf? → can you get me? → a scarf (=direct object) Here are german indirect object daimages in dative case: Indirect object daim word (Dative case)Meaningmirto/for medirto/for you (familiar)ihnto/for him/tihnto/for her/itihnto/for it/him/hereineto/for oneunto/for useuchto/for you (plural)ihnento/for themIhnto/for you (polite) Er hat mir das Geschenk. He gave it to me as a gift. Sie haben ihnen eine tolle Geschichte erzählt. They told them a wonderful story. The order of words for indirect object words is the same as a direct subject's phoned word. Almm from usually comes directly after the word, except with tenses such as perfect phrases and methods such as wollen. Sie bringt mir das Schwimmen bei. She taught me how to swim. Sie hat es ihm gegeben. She gave it to him. Ich will dir etwas sagen. I want to tell you something. When you have both direct object pronouns and indirect subject pronouns in the same sentence, direct object pronouns, or personal pronouns allegations always come first. A good way to keep this in mind is to think as follows: PAD = Accusative daim word Dative Sie haben es ihm verziehen. They forgive him for it. Ich bringe es dir schon bei. I'll teach you. Main pointThe german indirect The ao daimium is: mir, dir, ihm, ihr, ihm, Ihnen and einem among the few, and uns, euch, ihnen and Ihnen among many. Object appnisms indirectly come after the word, except with tenses as perfect and when used with methody phrases such as wollen. Indirect subject words always appear after the direct subject.'
